

EPA to check emissions
Provo faces August 31 clean air deadline

By A. CORY MALOY
Senior Reporter
Provo could possibly face sanctions similar to those being handed to Los Angeles if the carbon monoxide levels in Utah County do not reach acceptable levels as set by the Environmental Protection Agency.
Aug. 31 marks the end of an eight-month extension to the Dec. 31, 1987 deadline of the EPA's Clean Air Act of 1977 forcing urban areas to clean up their air.
Ralph Clegg, supervisor of vehicle emissions for the Bureau of Air Quality in Utah County, said Provo is one of the worst cities in the nation for carbon monoxide pollution levels.
"We don't have a real problem with ozone pollution, but our carbon monoxide levels are the sixth or seventh worst in the nation," he said.
The acceptable levels set by the EPA is below nine parts carbon monoxide to 1 million parts air. "Utah County is not in compliance because the air hit levels of 14 to 15 parts per million more than once," said Clegg.
Clegg said each city must submit an improvement plan to the EPA. The plan must meet government requirements and be approved by the EPA.
"We have one of the best managed plans in the nation," said Clegg.
Dean Gillam, chief of air planning for the Colorado regional branch of the EPA, said Provo has an approved plan, but the city did not meet the carbon monoxide standard by the deadline.

"We must assume that since Provo did not reach the standard, they had something wrong with their plan," said Gillam. "That is not to say they did not have an approved plan — the plan just did not work."
The plan must now be revised by Provo and resubmitted to the EPA for approval.
"The difference between Provo and Los Angeles is that Los Angeles did not have an approved plan to clean up their pollution problems," said Gillam. "Los Angeles is one among 14 cities that are facing sanctions (from the EPA) for not having an approved plan."
He said if Provo's revised plan does not meet the EPA's approval, the city could possibly face sanctions similar to Los Angeles.
Beginning at midnight Tuesday, Los Angeles will face the minimum EPA penalty which bans new construction of buildings that will emit more than 100 tons of ozone or carbon monoxide per year.
Both Gillam and Clegg agree that at this point there is no immediate threat to Utah communities of receiving EPA construction sanctions, but the possibility exists.
Clegg said Provo will continue its efforts to clean the air by adding other programs to its vehicle emissions program. "Seventy percent of the carbon monoxide comes from autos. The faster they go and the less often they stop, the lower amounts of pollution they will put out."

Anti-pollution measure
EPA poses L.A. construction ban

Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency said Monday it is banning construction of new facilities in greater Los Angeles that pose a major air pollution threat, a ban that could be extended to a dozen other U.S. cities this fall.
The EPA is legally required to move against Los Angeles because an eight-month moratorium on pollution penalties expires at midnight Tuesday. Congress imposed the moratorium last December to give itself more time to revise and clarify the Clean Air Act.
But negotiations over revising the law are stalled by disagreements over acid rain and other issues, and legislators hold out little hope of resolving the impasse before Congress adjourns sometime in October for election campaigning.
The EPA's construction ban applies only to facilities that annually produce more than 100 tons of carbon monoxide or volatile compounds like gasoline that form ozone, a major component of smog which causes lung damage.
Oil refineries, paint shops at auto assembly plants or large printing plants might emit that much ozone-causing pollution, but none is planned in the Los Angeles area.

A representative of state air pollution officers said the EPA's action was little more than "a paper tiger." California official James Lents said it would have no immediate impact on his state, whose regulations already forbid construction of facilities emitting more than a few tons of pollutants annually.
But Lents, executive officer of California's South Coast Air Quality Management District, said it might be harder to build needed sewage treatment plants if the ban continues for very long.
In announcing the ban, EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas renewed his appeal for Congress to provide guidance on dealing with the 107 cities or other areas that failed to meet federal air quality standards last year for ozone, carbon monoxide or both. The 107 areas cover about one-third of the U.S. population.
Thomas said if Congress fails to act again this year, the result could be "many more sanctions on areas as well as mandatory federal pollution plans and litigation, which will only further delay reaching the goal we all want — clean air."
The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, says existing law is not silent on the issue, as Thomas contends, and that all 107 areas should be penalized.

Decisions on similar construction bans are pending for Ventura County, Calif., and for the Indiana and Illinois suburbs of Chicago.
Before the end of the year, the EPA expects to adopt a policy requiring areas not meeting pollution standards to demonstrate steady progress, with a goal of an average 3 percent reduction in pollution concentrations annually, apart from any nationwide reductions.
When it adopts that policy, the agency will decide whether to impose construction bans at Denver, Reno, Nev.; Bakersfield, Sacramento and Fresno, Calif.; East St. Louis, Ill.; the Indiana suburbs of Louisville, Ky.; Cleveland, Atlanta and Dallas.
The agency said Dallas could escape penalties because of new proposals in its latest air quality plan.
Denver, Reno and Cleveland fail to meet carbon monoxide standards. Fresno fails both the carbon monoxide and ozone standards, and the other areas fall short of meeting ozone standards.

Anti-racists, candidates protest Ayrar church

By ADILSON PARRELLA
Senior Reporter
Anti-racist groups, supported by some political figures, met Monday to protest the scheduled opening of a white supremacist church.
Utahns Against Aryan Nations and the Western Foundation for Racial Equality protested across the street from the scheduled opening of white supremacist Dwight McCarthy's Church of Christian Israel's reading room in Salt Lake City.
Two Democratic Congressional candidates and Rep. Howard Nielson, R-Utah, joined about 50 demonstrators.
"We are quite pleased with the way the rally went and with the numbers that attended," said Zeric Smith, co-chairman of Utahns Against Aryan Nations.
Bryan Moss, a democrat campaigning against Orrin Hatch for the U.S. Senate, said, "When racism and hate are advocated by some, all citizens who honor equality and justice have an obligation to speak out."
According to Moss' press secretary Shauna Bona, the candidate attended the rally because he believes silent opposition is not enough to counter the spread of racist or anti-Semitic doctrine.

Bob Stringham, who is campaigning against Nielson, said, "I think it is absolutely important first to protest the moves that Dwight McCarthy is making and I am opposed to Mr. McCarthy's continual push to have a racist society."
Sen. Orrin Hatch's spokesman David Porter said the senator was not present at the rally because of previous campaign obligations, but emphasized Hatch's opposition to racism.
Rep. Howard Nielson's staff assistant Sam Klemm represented him at the rally, and expressed Nielson's strong opposition to racism and racist organizations.
Nonie Gilbert, spokeswoman for AryanWatch, another anti-racist organization, said, "Our point of view in aryanWatch is simply that this state has made itself just as clear as anybody can be, at every level, that they are not wanted. AryanWatch has a response to the Church (of Christian Israel), and the response is that you can call anything a church; you can commit murder and say, 'well, he did it in the name of a church,'" she said.

Utahn injured during air show

APRIL D. LOWRY
and the Associated Press

A Utah serviceman was among the approximately 500 people injured following the weekend air show disaster at Ramstein Air Base in West Germany.
Lt. Kim Strader, a 41-year-old Delta native was reportedly sitting in a helicopter when three Italian air force jets collided in flight during a precision flying show.
Strader's sister, Sharlene Green of Salt Lake City, said her brother may be transferred to a burn center at Brooks Field, Texas, as soon as his condition stabilizes, possibly today. Monday he was in serious condition.
Green said Strader underwent surgery late Sunday. He sustained burns over about 50 percent of his body, she said. Strader was stationed with a Air Force's medical detachment at Landstuhl Army Regional Medical Center, she said.
West Germany suspended military air shows Monday following the fiery crash at the aviation exhibition that killed 46 people. Scores of others suffered critical burns.
Sunday's tragedy at the U.S. Air Force Base was described as the worst air show crash involving spectators. Some were burned beyond recognition when three of the jets in a ten-member Italian flying team collided shortly before 4 p.m.. All three pilots were killed when the jets crashed while performing a stunt flight less than 200 off the ground.
One jet hurtled into the crowd in a ball of flame and people ran in panic. Many had tattered clothes and large burns on their bodies. Most of the more than 300,000 spectators at the annual air show were West Germans and Americans. The identities of the dead were not released, but at least 11 Americans were critically burned.

Sgt. Eddie Lee, a spokesman for Ramstein, said officials were having trouble identifying the dead and a list of victims would not be released until Tuesday.

"Eleven Americans are in critical condition at a U.S. military hospital in Landstuhl," Lee said, adding that there could be more such cases in other hospitals.
The ARD television network said the 345 people reported seriously injured included about 50 critically burned.

"Some were missing skin on their arms. The sun had come out, and there were a lot of people who didn't have their shirts on. A lot had black burns," said DeeDee Arrington Duke, a reporter for the unofficial U.S. military newspaper Stars and Stripes, who was at the scene.
Jim Beichler, a University of Maryland teacher, told the paper someone next to him had looked at one of the Italian planes and said, "He's going to hit. He's not going to make it."
"The plane blew up, and people started running," Beichler said. "One guy was on fire. Other people were wrapped up in barbed wire. There were small fires all around me."
Suedwest Radio said: "Many of those in critical condition are in danger of dying."
In Santa Barbara, Calif., where President Reagan is vacationing, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was sending messages of condolence to the victims' families.
Investigators were still trying to determine the cause of the tragedy.
Rudolf Tarter, head of the local government district that includes Ramstein, said West German officials put the death count at 45, one below the U.S. toll. There was no explanation for the discrepancy.
Defense Minister Rupert Scholz said officials will study ways for West Germany and its NATO allies to demonstrate their air forces' abilities without endangering spectators. Until then there will be no more air shows, he said.

Densley is youngest delegate
BYU student attends convention

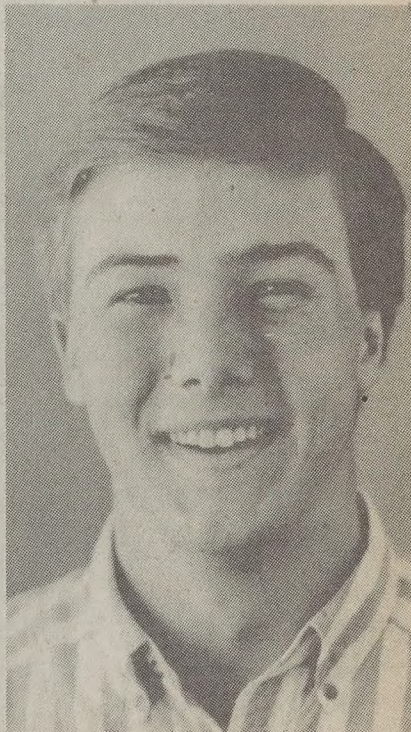

By DOUG GIBSON
City Editor

Most freshmen majoring in political science are likely to gain their first knowledge of politics by turning the pages of a textbook.
However, BYU freshman Steve Densley Jr. capitalized on an opportunity for an in-depth look at the American political system when the 18-year-old political science major attended the Republican National Convention in New Orleans.
Densley comes from a politically active family (his father, Steve Densley Sr., has run for political office under the Republican banner), and the young delegate worked as a Senate page in 1987 for Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch and has run for office and participated as a Utah representative in the Boys Nation Convention in Washington. The Boys Nation offers teen-agers an opportunity to participate in a mock-U.S. political process.
Densley was only 10 when Ronald Reagan was elected President of the United States. He is now in the group of young Americans who have been influenced, be it negatively or positively, to a large degree by the Reagan administration.

As evidenced by his past political history and participation as a delegate, Densley's reaction to Ronald Reagan's legacy was positive.
Although he attended the convention as a delegate for George Bush, Densley originally supported Jack Kemp in the early months of the campaign.
After Bush defeated his opposition his rivals, including Kemp, conceded the nomination and endorsed Bush, Densley became a Bush supporter.
"At the state convention the Bush campaign had put together a slate ... basically behind closed doors," said Densley. "These were the people that were suggested to the different county delegates as potential national delegates," he added.
"I had a lot of people telling me that I couldn't win, because I wasn't on the slate," recalled Densley. "So I made a lot of calls to the floor heads, tried to talk to the delegates. When I arrived at the convention, I had somebody run up to me and stick a paper in my face and say 'this is how you're supposed to vote.' I knew that wasn't right," said Densley.

So the BYU student campaigned hard among state delegates and managed to be one of the 28 delegates elected to represent Bush in New Orleans. Since 24 of the delegates elected were originally on the Bush selection slate, the election of the recent high school graduate was not accomplished without hard work.
"It's hard to see the emotion (of the national convention) on television," said Densley. "You're removed from all that while watching, but on the floor it seems like the most natural thing in the world to wear an elephant on your head."
Densley said the most exciting moment in the convention was when Ronald Reagan delivered his speech and said "George was there."
"That became the theme of the convention and a lot of people picked up on it," said Densley.
The remark uttered by the president was in response to July's Democratic National Convention during which Democratic Sen. Edward Kennedy of

FBI, NASA probe cuts in rocket seals

SALT LAKE CITY — Measures have been taken to guard against sabotage of space shuttle booster O-rings even as the FBI and NASA probe the discovery of cuts in some of the critical rocket seals made at Utah's HydraPak plant.

Both HydraPak and rocket maker Morton Thiokol Inc., which contracts with the company for the rubber-like O-rings, say none of the damaged seals had been shipped to, or received by, Morton Thiokol.

James Dockstader, HydraPak vice president of production, said a "very small number" of O-rings that appeared to have been deliberately cut were found by the company in June. The FBI, NASA and Morton Thiokol were immediately notified, he said.

"We have taken steps to correct that problem and we don't expect that problem to reoccur," Dockstader said Monday. "We are convinced the steps we've taken will be appropriate."

He refused to detail the measures taken, but did not rule out the upgrading of security at the company's operations in West Jordan, a suburb about 20 miles south of Salt Lake City.

"We had good security before this happened," Dockstader said. "(But) we're always looking at ways to improve our security."

Former HydraPak inspector Cathy Crocker has said she was forced to resign not long after she discovered three slashed O-rings in May.

Solidarity wants Lech Walesa for talks

WARSAW, Poland — About 5,000 workers joined a strike at a steel mill Monday, and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was quoted as saying he would not join government talks unless he could represent the banned trade union.

Walesa's comments came a day after authorities said they might allow him to take part in negotiations, but only as an individual.

Ten enterprises remained on strike nationwide Monday after two weeks of labor unrest.

During the peak of the unrest, about 20 enterprises employing 100,000 workers were idled.

"Strikers control a substantial part of the complex's territory," Polish state radio said in a report on the strike.

"They control roads inside the plant. They check IDs of passing people who are not on strike."

Niemczyk said the strikers demanded recognition of Solidarity and that Walesa negotiate on their behalf.

Andrus releases Guard to combat fires

Gov. Cecil Andrus placed the entire state of Idaho under an extreme fire emergency on Monday, releasing members of the National Guard to reinforce some 2,000 firefighters already battling the worst of dozens of wildfires from the Panhandle to the Wyoming border.

The declaration came as fire bosses scrambled to secure increasingly-sparse manpower and equipment ahead of forecasts for another weather system packing high winds and more dry lightning.

"We're getting a few people at a time," said Jeanne Felmy of the Payette National Forest, where nearly 700 firefighters already supported by some Guard personnel battled the 3,900-acre, human-caused Eagle Bar fire near Hells Canyon.

"We still have 10 more crews on order, but the resources are spread so thin throughout the Northwest that we don't know when we'll get them," Ms. Felmy said.

The governor's action put Guard forces at the Forest Service's disposal for the next 30 days. More than 80 guardsmen and dozens of pieces of equipment were already on the fire lines Monday.

Old park maintains majesty despite fires

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Forest fires have engulfed nearly one quarter of the nation's oldest national park, but only three small buildings have been lost and even with the blackened forests and thick smoke, Yellowstone hasn't lost its majesty.

The series of fires have so far spared the major tourist attractions at the 116-year-old matriarch of the parks, although one fire still causes concern for the safety of the facilities around Old Faithful geyser.

Scorched tree trunks punctuate some camping and picnic areas and some hiking trails have been lost, along with a comfort station, outhouse and historic cabin.

A total of more than 450,000 of the park's 2.2 million acres have been swept by the worst fires in the area in at least 200 years.

But flames so far have been successfully diverted around buildings and monuments. Power lines and some cabins have been saved under the protection of fire-proof blankets.

Declining water supply restricts use

WASHINGTON — While this summer's drought is imposing new water restrictions on many Americans, water use already was down in many areas, due in part to declining supply.

A long-term analysis by the U.S. Geological Survey found that the amount of water drawn from lakes, streams, reservoirs, wells and springs fell 10 percent between 1980 and 1985. The analysis, the eighth since 1950, was the first to disclose a drop in usage.

The decreases were spread across the nation, with a majority of states reporting less water use during 1985 than in 1980, said Wayne Solley, a survey hydrologist and senior author of the report.

Spot sampling during the current drought indicates some increases in use of water from various sources, but the agency said it did not have enough information to make national estimates. It took two years to compile all the data for the 1985 analysis.

Reporting that information from the first half of this decade, the agency said a number of factors likely contributed to the decline in water use — not the least of which was that previous consumption left less water available.

Utah County Democrats open fall campaign headquarters

By LANE WILLIAMS
News Editor

Buoyed by recent polls showing Democrats making headway around the state, the Utah County Democratic party opened its fall campaign headquarters in Provo Monday.

About 100 visitors filed through an open house at 1256 N. 500 West during the afternoon, and met various Democratic candidates for statewide and county offices.

A Sunday KSL/Deseret News poll showed that only 31 percent of Utah's residents would vote for the incumbent state representatives. Because the Republican party has dominated the state house in recent years, the poll results show room for Democratic gains.

The party is enthusiastic about possible gains, and that enthusiasm has boiled over into an increase in volunteers, according to Lavon Laursen, county vice-chairperson. Larsen said that in 1984, even phoning efforts proved difficult to get volunteers. Now, "people are just coming in."

Various Democratic candidates came and went throughout the afternoon on Monday to offer their assessments of their candidacy.

Robert W. Stringham, a long-time union official who is vying in September's primary against Murray businessman Craig Oliver for a shot to take on Rep. Howard Nielsen in November's general election, shares offices with the party.

He said that when party officials approached him last year about running for office, he expected that it would be a three-year commitment, gearing more toward the 1990 election, but that he now feels that Nielsen is vulnerable this year.

Oliver returned to Salt Lake County earlier in the afternoon, and was not available for comment. Stringham said polls show him with a slight lead over Oliver.

Paul Van Dam, the party's candidate for attorney general, achieved some notoriety in 1987, when he played himself in the television movie "At Mother's Request." The film portrayed the case of Mark Schreuder, a young man who killed his grandfather, millionaire Franklin S. Bradshaw. Van Dam was Schreuder's defense attorney.

Van Dam said that despite his notoriety he still trails Republican incumbent David Wilkinson in the polls. He said he is encouraged, however, because Wilkinson remains below 50 percent in the polls and his (Van Dam's) numbers have consistently risen.

Van Dam said he wished that the attorney general's race were non-partisan. He said, quoting Democratic presidential nominee Gov. Michael Dukakis, that issue in the attorney general's race is "really not one of ideology, it's one of competence."

Van Dam said that Democrats in Utah can go against the national party platform in issues such as abortion. Stringham said he opposes abor-

Sen. Hatch kicks off re-election bid

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch officially launched his bid for a third term on Monday, pledging to wage an aggressive campaign despite an overwhelming lead over Democratic challenger Brian Moss.

Hatch opened the campaign with an open house at his campaign headquarters and was scheduled to begin a 12-city campaign tour later in the day with visits to Logan, Brigham City and Ogden.

The tour is scheduled to end on Thursday with a rally at the Utah

Capitol that will feature an appearance by former heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali.

"I feel good about the way things are going so far, and I don't want to take anything for granted. I don't want to run any way but full bore," Hatch said in response to reporters' questions during the open house. "My issue is to get the idea across about how hard we've been working back there."

In a recent Deseret News-KSL-TV poll, Hatch led Moss, a Salt Lake City businessman, by 47 percent. Hatch also has enjoyed a big advantage in fund-raising, collecting about $2 million for his re-election drive. Moss has raised about $100,000.

Hatch became Utah's junior senator in 1976 by upsetting Moss's father, then-Sen. Frank Moss. However, the younger Moss says his father's defeat was not a factor in his decision to challenge Hatch.

Hatch's fund-raising has been successful enough that the campaign is permitting local candidates to sell $10 tickets to rallies in the 12 cities Hatch will visit and keep the proceeds for their own campaigns.

Campaign manager Bud Scruggs said the only money the Hatch campaign will receive is an estimated $4,000 to $5,000 from a dinner to be held following the Capitol rally Thursday.

Jury hears testimony in Willard murder trial

Associated Press

BRIGHAM CITY — An eight-member jury began hearing testimony late Monday in the first-degree murder trial of Roger Wells, who has been charged in the shooting death of his wife, Carol.

The body of Mrs. Wells, 42, was found by her sons in the family home in Willard Oct. 25, 1987. She had been shot twice in the head, authorities said.

A few hours later, police said they found Wells, 45, unconscious in his truck from an apparent carbon monoxide poisoning suicide attempt.

In testimony Monday, the five-woman, three-man jury heard that Wells purchased a .38-caliber revolver from an Ogden pawnshop on Aug. 7, 1987, and that he bought hollow-point bullets on Oct. 24 — the day before Mrs. Wells was found dead. Jurors also heard testimony from two police officers who said they responded to a domestic disturbance at the Wells' home and that Mrs. Wells appeared frightened, but also was belligerent, while her husband appeared calm.

However, Mrs. Wells' sister, Joan Vandenbosch of Ogden, said that in a telephone conversation shortly after the domestic disturbance Wells acknowledged grabbing his wife by the arm and threatening to kill her.

Earlier, in his opening statement, defense attorney Martin Custen said that Wells, who has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, was a man who approached his breaking point and did that which no one would rationally do.

Custen said the jury would hear testimony about Mrs. Wells' personality.

Free English classes offered to residents

By KEVIN NIENDORF
Asst. City Editor

The Alpine School District is currently offering free English language classes to non-English speaking residents 18 years or older in order to enable them to function more independently in the community.

Instructor Linda Shelton, who has a master's degree in communications from BYU, has taught the class to residents for the past 11 years. The class is not free for those who are in the United States on a student visa only. The cost for those without a resident alien card is $2 an hour.

"A resident can register during any night the class is offered," said Shelton. "Most fit in well as the classes are small and informal."

According to Shelton, students currently enrolled are at different levels in the program. "We have a student who has a master's degree but intends to improve his pronunciation."

Conversational skills are taught so students feel comfortable going shopping, to the bank, to the post office or to the doctor as well as seek other services in the community.

An intermediate level course is also offered to strengthen the students' vocabulary, grammar, pronunciation and overall ability to communicate in English. Shelton said students may attend the free classes for as long as they want. "We'll meet their needs as long as they want to come. We have all levels."

Books are provided free of charge for use in the classroom. However, those who wish to take a book home will need to purchase one for $5.

The class is not geared toward helping foreigners pass the TOEFL test or the U.S. citizenship test. According to Shelton, those looking for help in that area usually seek help at BYU. The class she and one other instructor teach is more of a "survival English," she said.

Classes meet every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in room 107 at Mountain View High School in Orem. All students should bring their resident alien cards with them to register.

Orientation draws record crowd

By ALAN K. BAILEY
and KENNETH S. ROGERSON
Universe Staff Writers

Orientation week activities offer many opportunities for students to get acquainted with the university and to make friends.

Approximately 4,500 students registered for and attended Orientation Week this year, said Russ Sumpter, associate director of student programs. That figure is higher than ever before.

Among the activities offered were 'Y' Groups, a freshman banquet, BYUSA-sponsored dances and evening activities, department orientations, new student seminars, an "Infofair" and a reception with President Jeffrey R. Holland for parents and students.

"(Orientation Week) has helped me get my schedule straightened out," said J.D. Calhoun, a sophomore from Gaithersburg, Md., majoring in fine arts. "The enthusiasm of the faculty helps you get excited to get into the program," he said.

Kevin Clark, who works in the Academic Advisement Center, which coordinates the New Student Seminars, said the seminars are evaluated constantly so they can be improved.

"If you compare BYU to other universities, you'll discover how great the program is," said Clark, who is a graduate student in accounting from Lincoln, Neb.

Clark attended another university his freshman year and participated in the orientation week activities there. "Best of all, here it is free. At other universities, it isn't," he said.

Calhoun, who transferred from the University of Virginia, echoed Clark and added that the seminars here help students see the complete educational picture.

However, Dr. Ralph Barney, a communications professor, said he has mixed feelings about the effectiveness of the seminars. "So much is dumped on the students in the seminars that some of them come out more confused than when they went in."

Barney said the advantage of having the department orientations and seminars set as they are is that a great deal of important information is offered, making students more aware of options open to them. "If a student misses them, he immediately puts himself at risk."

This year there were 11 different seminars, including departmental meetings, ranging from "Knowing Your University" and "Choosing an Academic Major and a Career" to specific advice for students who have already chosen a field of study.

"I think these seminars are great for people who don't know," said Heather Haymore, a freshman in design from Tucson, Ariz. "Most of the information seems to already be printed somewhere, but most people don't read the printed brochures, so these are a real help."

Paul Jensen, a freshman also from Tucson, majoring in political science, said even though he has already decided on a major, the seminars helped him consider some things that he had not thought of before, like types of employers and where he wants to live.

Clark said the seminars help students who have made some decisions but need help in a particular area.

Janel Barnett, a freshman from Coolidge, Ariz. majoring in international relations, said the seminars helped her decide on a major.

BYU student falls off cliff, drowns

An 18-year-old BYU honors student drowned after falling 200 feet from a cliff into a lake in Kentucky on Aug. 14.

Matthew Christian Phillips, of Herndon, Va., was vacationing with his family at Lake Cumberland State Park, near Russell Springs, Ky., when he fell while chasing a loose volleyball.

"From that vantage point you couldn't tell there was a cliff dropping so sharply from the embankment," said Janna Dewey Phillips,

Matthew's mother. "No one could see it."

Matthew managed to grab a tree root and was trying to get back up when the root broke, she said. He hit his head on some rocks and may have been unconscious when he fell into the water.

Thair Ralph Phillips, Matthew's father, attempted to rescue the boy, but was unable to find Matthew after jumping from the cliff to the lake.

Karen Thorne, a friend of the family, called Thair's rescue attempt "miraculous." Thair sustained facial and head injuries and a broken wrist. He was later released from Russell Springs Hospital.

At approximately 10 p.m. the same evening, rescue-squad divers from the Russell County Sheriff's Department discovered Matthew's body in the lake.

The Russell County Deputy Coroner confirmed the cause of death as accidental drowning.

Matthew had completed his freshman year at BYU as an honors student. He had plans to major in communications and pursue a career in journalism.

He was also awaiting his call to serve a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

'Flea Market' lectures feature BYU professors

By KENNETH S. ROGERSON
Campus Editor

The Flea Market of Ideas, a series of monthly lectures which has been a BYU tradition for about 10 years, is a positive means of communication between faculty and students, said an administrative assistant for the Honors Program, the department that sponsors the lectures.

"It is a very enriching way for students and professors to interact," said Leroy Gunnell. "Members of the community as well as students are invited. I think it enhances the university idea of involving everyone."

The lectures are given once a month for three afternoons. Six different professors speak on a certain topic, two each afternoon. Three "Flea Markets" will be held each semester.

This month's series, beginning today, addresses the subject, "Have You Read a Good Book Lately?" and will spotlight professors discussing topics ranging from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" to discovering microbes.

Catherine T. Cormann, an assistant professor of English who will discuss Chaucer, said she thinks it is a good way for students to get wide exposure to ideas outside their majors.

Gunnell said speakers are chosen from all the BYU faculty. "We choose from all professors on campus. They don't have to be just honors professors. We go out and look for people who can speak on subjects which will fit into our theme," he said.

The Flea Market of Ideas is scheduled for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at 1 and 2 p.m. each day in 321 ELWC. The lectures are free.

Original show to open drama season

Universe Services

BYU is planning a diverse 1988-89 drama season that will open with an original love story.

"Sally Loved Me" by Stephen M. Pullen of BYU's PDA (playwright, director, actor) workshop, will open Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Margetts Arena Theatre, HFAC.

Barta Heiner is directing, and performances will run through Oct. 8 with an Oct. 3 matinee at 4 p.m.

Also planned for September is "Ah, Wilderness!" Eugene O'Neill's nostalgic comedy of adolescence and middle-age in 1906 Connecticut.

The production is a centennial tribute to one of America's greatest playwrights and will play Sept. 29-Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m. and Oct. 10 at 4 p.m. in the Pardoe Theatre, HFAC.

The tribute will continue Nov. 3-19 when Charles Metten directs three O'Neill Sea Plays. "Bound East for Cardiff," "In the Zone" and "Ile" will include a matinee Nov. 14 at 4 p.m.

Charles Whitman and Pat Debenham will combine their directing talents to present "Nineteen 40's Radio Hour" by Walter Jones. The evening of singing and dancing pulls audiences back to the era when "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy" were playing in everyone's living room. The production will be Nov. 10-26 at 7:30 p.m. and Nov. 21 at 4 p.m.

An original script from PDA alumnus Reed McCollm will play in the Margetts Arena Theatre Winter Semester. "Holding Patterns," directed by Traci Hainsworth, will open Jan. 19 at 7:30 p.m. and continue through Feb. 4. A Monday matinee is schedule Jan. 30 at 4 p.m.

Heiner will direct a second production, Shakespeare's "Richard III," in January. Murder, war and the lust for power enhance the historical telling of a man's quest for the crown.

The production will be staged from Jan. 26 to Feb. 11 at 7:30 p.m. with a matinee to be held Feb. 6 at 4 p.m.

BYU is negotiating with the rights to the musical "Big River," winner of seven Tony and seven Drama Desk Awards, for production March 1-11 (matinee March 6 at 4 p.m.). The William Hauptman and Roger Miller script captures the spirit of Mark Twain's classic tale of Huck Finn and Jim, the runaway slave, who float down the Mississippi on a raft. It is scheduled to play in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

Also in March will be "Stepping Out," written by Richard Harris and directed by Marion Bentley. The play won London's Standard Drama Award for 1984 as Comedy of the Year and deals with a group of women and one man who attend weekly tap-dance classes in a dingy North London church hall. It will be staged March 15-April 15 at 4 p.m.

Tom Rogers' translation of Dostoevski's "Crime and Punishment" will be presented Spring Semester in the Margetts Arena Theatre. This story of pride, rebellion, guilt and redemption is a new translation from the original Russian text.

Water aerobics popularity growing

By NUAN UDOM
Special to the Universe

Water aerobics is becoming a popular way to reduce stress, increase flexibility, improve cardiovascular endurance and decrease percent body fat, according to a BYU physical education instructor.

Marilyn Buck said one of the reasons for this kind of exercise is that it causes less stress on the body than other forms of exercise, particularly the joints. Also, the water is supportive enough so that those people who find land aerobics difficult for physical reasons will not have any problem in the water, she said.

Among the students who have participated in this class is eight-month pregnant student Kelly Valle, who is a junior from Meridian, Idaho majoring in English.

"I've noticed that I feel good about it because there is something that I can do," said Valle.

"I can't run around and bounce around because of the baby and in the water there is not any impact or stress on my stomach."

Buck explained that water aerobics, because of the buoyancy of the water, are possible for a pregnant woman and people who have physical problems. This reduces the body weight by 10 percent of the actual weight on dry land.

This means that the legs of a 130-pound woman in water must support only 13 pounds. Thus, there is less stress in each movement.

This kind of exercise also works well for people who have had back and knee surgery.

Buck described a girl in her class that had had major back surgery a year ago. Since starting to do water aerobics, she has gained some feeling of flexibility and some strength in the muscles.

The written purpose of the class is to help improve cardiovascular endurance.

But according to Buck, the instructor's intention is to help students to improve everything: flexibility, cardiovascular endurance, and reduction of stress and the percentage of body fat.

Joyce Anderson, a senior from Sunset majoring in physical education, said, "The number one advantage is that it helped to release stress caused by my classes."

"I would have gone crazy if I hadn't had this class," she said. "I use this class to work out frustration."

Operetta opens de Jong Concert year 'Pirates' returns

By ADRIAN GOSTICK
Lifestyle Editor

Clayne Robison and the cast from BYU's successful summer adaptation of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance" will return to the de Jong Concert Hall this weekend for three encore performances.

The operetta played in June to packed houses, and Assistant Director Martha West predicts the same good turn-out for the Sept. 1, 2 and 3 shows.

"In the summer we turned away just as many people as we seated," she said. "We had good reviews. It's a different approach to the play and I think we make it more realistic."

Clayne Robison, who plays Major General, is a BYU faculty member. Robison also produces the show.

According to a BYU Music Department press release, Dennis Todd, a BYU graduate student and a vocalist, considers "The Pirates of Penzance" to be the best of Gilbert and Sullivan's works.

"While it is the most British-Victorian of the operettas, it is also the most universal," he said. "The operettas were never intended to survive the test of time, but they have. 'Pirates' is wonderful for people who have never seen opera and wonderful for children. It combines swashbuckling with comedy, satire and romance."

The summer cast will meet for a dress rehearsal Wednesday night before opening the three-day run on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

"The entire cast is back," West said. "Three are missing on missions, but everyone else will be back."

The cast includes Eric Glissmeyer as the Pirate King, Alejandro Gomez as Frederic and Stephanie Buckley as Mabel (a role made famous by Linda Rondstat on Broadway).

According to West, the orchestra (conducted by Steve Green) gets involved in the production.

"There is a part where the soprano goes on and on until the orchestra members start throwing things at her," West said. "The chorus is what really makes the show, though."

According to Todd, the play uses realistic emotions mixed with crazy situations.

"When 'Pirates' reaches its most zany and crazy parts, there is usually a moment when the operetta becomes serious and pulls some true life human drama into focus," he said. "The scene where Mabel and Frederic bid each other a tearful good-bye is powerful. The music is beautiful and heightens the moment. At least three scenes show genuine, honest drama to play against all the fun."

First faculty music recital will include 'world premiere'

By ANN B. SOUTH
Asst. Lifestyle Editor

The world premiere of "Piano Poems," a piano composition written by a BYU graduate student, will be at the first faculty music recital of the year Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Madson Recital Hall, HFAC.

BYU assistant professor of piano Jeffrey Shumway will perform the piece, written by Glenn Palmer, in addition to works by Fredric Chopin and Ludwig van Beethoven.

According to Charlene Winters, BYU's fine arts editor, Shumway is "oriented toward the full artist."

"What distinguishes him is that he likes to take a particular composer and work for perfecting his work in that area," Winters said.

Shumway will perform all four of Chopin's ballades. He said that he has performed these pieces separately but never all in the same recital.

"I've had a wonderful love of those pieces (Chopin's) for a long time," Shumway said.

Shumway said he enjoys learning new pieces for recitals because it enables him to become very familiar with a particular composition and relate to it better. He wanted to give his recital early in the year because he said he has many other projects ahead, including a desire to perform all 32 of Beethoven's sonatas over the next year.

One of these sonatas, "Sonata in E-flat Major, opus 31, no. 2," will be in Tuesday night's program. Shumway said the sonata has a "nice affinity with the Chopin piece."

"We all like to perform — we're a performing faculty," said Shumway.

Shumway received his bachelor's degree from BYU, where he was named Most Outstanding Pianist and Most Outstanding Musician. He earned a master's at Julliard and his doctorate from Indiana University.

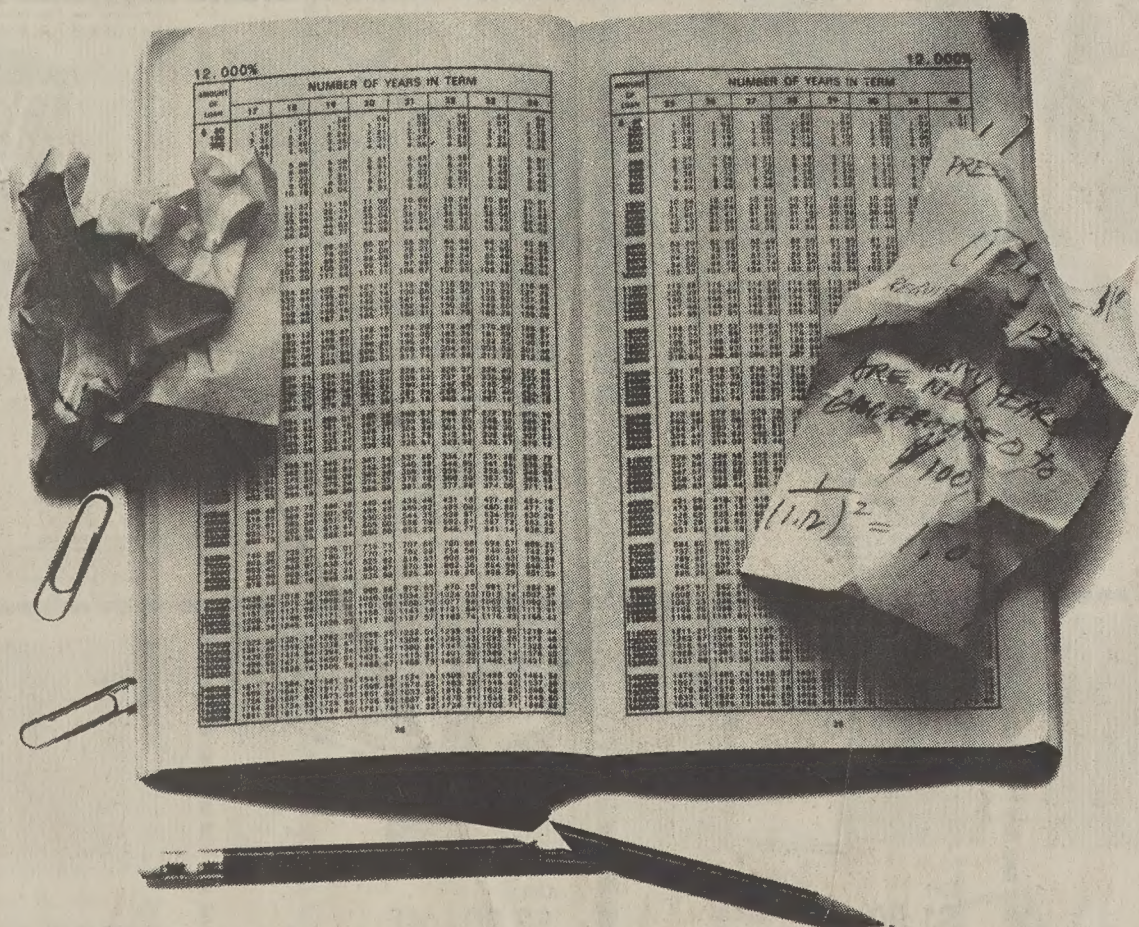

Shumway came to BYU in 1985.

Steffi Graf, Ivan Lendl top seeds at U.S. Open; Sweden looks for Grand Slam with men's title

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Two Grand Slams may be completed at the 1988 U.S. Open — one by Steffi Graf, the other by a country.

Steffi Graf's bid for the Grand Slam has been well publicized. Another possible Slam has not.

If Mats Wilander, Stefan Edberg or a lesser-known player from Sweden were to win the Open, it would give Sweden a sweep of the major men's titles in 1988.

Wilander won the French and Australian Opens, while Edberg beat Boris Becker to win at Wimbledon.

Both Wilander and Edberg began play Monday as the Open started its two-week run at the National Tennis Center.

Wilander is seeded second behind Ivan Lendl, who is attempting to win his fourth straight U.S. Open.

Lendl and Graf will be the center of attention as the tournament gets underway.

Both players will make history if they win.

Graf would become the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to sweep the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. championships in the same year. The only other players to accomplish the feat are Don Budge in 1938, Maureen Connolly in 1953 and Rod Laver in 1962 and 1969.

"If you win the Grand Slam, people think you are one of the greatest players," Graf said. "I would like to be considered like that."

Graf thinks she can win and so do a lot of tennis experts.

"She's totally dominant," CBS commentator May Carillo said. "The only way I can see her losing is if she's injured or sick or unbelievably nervous."

Graf has been virtually unbeatable the past 20 months, losing only four of 129 matches. The only players to beat the 19-year-old West German during that span are Martina Navratilova, who did it twice last year, and Gabriela Sabatini, who has done it twice this year.

Barring upsets, Graf would play Chris Evert in the semifinals. Evert, who recently married former Olympic skier Andy Mill, is a six-time U.S. Open winner. But she hasn't won a Grand Slam event since the 1986 French Open and last year she failed to reach the semifinals at the U.S. Open for the first time in her career.

A Navratilova-Sabatini matchup is possible in the other semifinal.

Sabatini may first have to play Pam Shriver, who has reached the U.S. Open quarterfinals the past six years. And Navratilova may have to get past Natalia Zvereva, the Soviet teenager who has beaten her twice this year.

Graf's bid for the Slam is overshadowing Lendl's attempt to win his fourth straight Open title.

Although Lendl has been in six straight Open finals, it won't be shocking if the streak ends this year.

Lendl doesn't get the kind of respect John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Bjorn Borg got when they were No. 1. None of those players ever won four straight U.S. Opens, though.

If Lendl wins again, he will surpass the modern men's record of three straight titles he shares with McEnroe.

"Four in a row would be nice," Lendl said, "but I'm not really thinking of that. I'm just focusing on trying to win the tournament."

Lendl, who has been slowed by injuries, has not won a Grand Slam event this year. But he is healthy now and determined to maintain the No. 1 ranking he has held for nearly three years. "Once you are No. 1, you never want to let go of it," he said. "It's a real challenge to keep it."

Lendl's prime challengers at Flushing Meadow include Wimbledon champion Stefan Edberg and Mats Wilander, the Australian and French Open winner. If either wins the U.S. Open, it will give Sweden a sweep of the Grand Slam titles.

Another potential threat is 18-year-old American Andre Agassi, who has won six titles this year and risen from No. 25 to No. 4 in the world rankings. Agassi enters the Open with an 18-match winning streak.

Two-time Wimbledon winner Boris Becker could face Edberg in the U.S. Open quarterfinals. Another intriguing matchup, McEnroe vs. Wilander, is possible in the fourth round.

McEnroe has played erratically during his recent comeback. He showed signs of his old brilliance at the French Open and the U.S.-Argentina Davis Cup match but played poorly at Wimbledon, where he was beaten by Wally Masur in the second round.

Connors, a five-time champion, will be back for his 19th straight Open. But, at 35, he is no longer considered a serious title contender.

The total prize money for the tournament is a record $4.4 million. Each singles winner receives $275,000, while the runners-up get $137,500.

Lawrence Taylor suspended; to miss four Giant games

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lawrence Taylor, the New York Giants' All-Pro linebacker, has been suspended for 30 days by the National Football League for violating the league's substance abuse policy, the NFL announced today.

The suspension will cause Taylor to miss the first four games of the season, starting with Monday night's game against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins. Taylor will be eligible to return for the fifth game, against the Redskins at Washington.

Ironically, Washington defensive end Dexter Manley returned to camp today after serving a 30-day suspension for substance abuse, just in time for the season opener.

"Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants has been notified that he has been placed on that club's non-football illness list for a period of 30 days, effective today," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said.

"The action was taken after Taylor violated provisions of the NFL's substance abuse policy," he said, "he has been instructed to remain out of the Giants' training facility until Sept. 28."

Browne would say only that substances showed up during a recent drug test.

Other league sources said it was during the team's routine training camp test.

Taylor, who voluntarily submitted himself to treatment for drug abuse in the winter of 1986, returned to have his finest season in 1987, becoming only the second defensive player in NFL history to be named league MVP as the Giants won the Super Bowl.

He has been named to the Pro Bowl in each of his seven seasons.

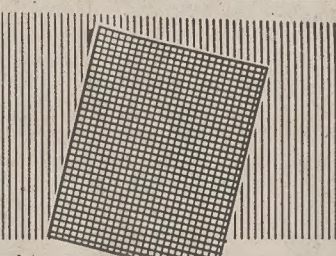

Taylor became the ninth player suspended so far this season for violation of the League's substance abuse policy.

Seven, including Manley, served their 30 days during their teams' training camp because, like Taylor, it was their second violation. The eighth, Tony Collins of Indianapolis, was suspended for the season for a third violation.

Season opens in Hawaii

Women's volleyball begins

By SUZANNE GIBBS
Asst. Sports Editor

When the 1987 volleyball season opened for the BYU women's team, it looked like they were left with an empty court.

The team, which finished fifth in the nation, lost five of its starters, but head coach Elaine Michaelis hopes for a successful season as they open season play in Hawaii today.

"Having two All-Americans and an All-Conference player return to the front row should give us great hitting and blocking," said Michaelis. "But the loss of three good defensive specialists and an exceptional setter will hurt us, especially in our passing."

The Cougars are currently ranked eighth in the nation and first in the High Country Athletic Conference.

They will face Chaminade, BYU-Hawaii, Oregon and Hawaii this week. Their toughest match will be on Sept. 1 against the Hawaii Rainbows, who took the national championship in 1987 and are currently ranked second in the nation.

BYU will begin play without freshman redshirt Daphne Gee, who took over the setting position from All-American setter Marilisa Salmi. Gee has a "hot spot" in her left leg which could develop into a stress fracture.

While Gee is out, sophomore Carla Gee and junior Cherie Sam Fong will take over the setting position.

All-American Player of the Year Tee Williams leads the Rainbows and will move from middle blocker to outside hitter this year. The Rainbows are expected to challenge for a second straight NCAA Championship.

Returning to the Cougar's front line are middle blocker Dylann Duncan and outside hitter Jill Sanders Plumb, who both led the Cougars in all hitting and blocking categories last season. The two were also selected by their teammates as co-captains for the 1988 season.

Duncan had 222 total blocks last season and 539 kills. She ended the season hitting .326 and created new school records in total kills (1,533), block assists (567) and total blocks (686). Plumb ended with 603 kills and a .360 hitting percentage.

Sophomore outside hitter and middle blocker Marinda Gorbahn returns to the Cougar squad healthier after she missed a lot of preseason play last year. Gorbahn had 305 kills and hit .262.

Junior Jan Giles returns to the outside hitter position to add strength and power. Freshman redshirt Heather Bova also returns.

BYU continues its Finnish legacy

Game to be shown at Marriott Center

Universe services

Football fans interested in viewing Thursday night's BYU-Wyoming football game have been invited to witness the live telecast on campus at the Marriott Center. There is no charge, and seats are available on a first come, first serve basis.

Doors will open at 7:30 p.m. University officials described the invitation as a goodwill gesture that will allow fans an opportunity to share the excitement of the season opener.

Thursday night's game in Laramie, which is scheduled for an 8:40 p.m. kickoff, is being carried exclusively on ESPN cable television. The Cougars' home opener will be played in Provo the following Thursday evening against Texas.

That game will also be carried live by ESPN. Kickoff for the Cougar-Longhorn game is set for 6 p.m. (MDT).

with the addition of freshman outside hitter Tea Nieminen from Lahti, Finland. Nieminen currently plays on the Finnish National Team with Salmi and will give BYU immediate help with hitting and blocking.

Stephanie Trane, a junior college All-American from Utah Valley Community College, will also provide help in hitting and blocking.

Michaelis expects to have better blocking and serving this year, which are two areas they had problems with in the past.

"Our offense may not be as sophisticated as it has been in the last few years, mostly because we won't be quite as good at passing," she said, "but I expect us to be a better blocking and serving team this year. We have three players doing jump serves and Dylann is getting especially accurate with hers."

Duncan ended the 1987 season with 99 service aces.

In addition to Salmi, BYU lost outside hitter Vickie Backus Solomon, middle blocker and outside hitter Diane Campbell, defensive specialists Kathy Barnes Higbee, Corinne Russell and Vonda Skousen.

Russell, Campbell and Solomon all received honors. Campbell has also returned as a student assistant coach with the team.

The Cougars will face a demanding schedule again this season. They will host two tournaments and travel to three others. Their first home games will be against Texas, Pacific and Pittsburgh in the BYU Regional Challenge Cup on Sept. 9-10, in the Marriott Center.

They will then host the Beehive Classic on Sept. 15-17. Southern Utah State College, Weber State College, University of Utah and Utah State University will take part in the three-day tournament in the newly remodeled Smith Fieldhouse.

All games will be held in the Fieldhouse unless they are otherwise scheduled.

In the past 19 years, BYU has appeared in national meets 17 times, second only to the University of California in Los Angeles at 19 times.

The Cougars have also placed in the top five in the nation seven times, in the top 10 in the nation 14 times and have won the conference championship 14 of 19 attempts.

10 of the players have been named All-Americans, one or more in each of the past seven years.

Going to class in pajamas can be reality

Educational TV offers college courses

By DOUG GIBSON
City Editor

While students brave chilly weather and trudge to early morning classes with sand-filled eyes and shivering shoulders, some have no doubt fantasized of a classroom complete with a reclining easy chair, warm blanket and chips with dip on the coffee table.

It's now a reality. Students who tire of dressing up, combing their hair, fighting for a parking spot or walking through a snowstorm for class can now take advantage of the more than 20 college courses being offered on KULC Channel 9, Utah's educational television station.

The courses begin Sept. 26 in conjunction with the start of classes in Utah's nine public colleges.

Although the classes are not applicable to BYU, students who in the future plan to continue their education at a state public college can transfer the credit received for the telecourses.

Courses to be offered in the fall semester include geography, sociology, U.S. history, classic cinema, business computers and the Constitution.

According to KULC, viewers may tune into the station for their own benefit or may pay tuition fees and receive university credit. The tuition fees are the same as the class on campus.

The courses will be taught in conjunction with actual courses at the colleges and universities. During the live classes, student viewers will be invited to phone in either comments or questions.

Besides the college courses, in the next few weeks courses will be offered to adults seeking a high school diploma or who just want to brush up on their basic skills.

Beginning Aug. 29 and continuing for four weeks, a tune-up course entitled Practical Purpose is airing on KULC. The program, intended for high school seniors and adults, covers such basics as reading, writing and math.

Also for the next four weeks teleclasses for high school dropouts offering instruction in preparation for the general education development test, an adult alternative for the high school diploma, will be offered.

KULC is a public television station licensed to the Utah System of Higher Education. It is non-profit and airs Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 6 to 11 p.m.

Produce distributed on Sundays to needy Utahns

By DOUG GIBSON
City Editor

Garden produce was distributed to needy Utahns when Share the Harvest, an annual project sponsored by Utahns against Hunger and the Utah County Food and Shelter Coalition, began last Sunday in Provo.

The program, now in its third year, provides assistance to low income or homeless individuals and families.

Food was distributed last Sunday from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. at food and shelter distribution headquarters located at 55 W. 200 North in Provo. Distribution will continue at the same time each Sunday through Sept. 11.

"Sunday we were able to assist 134 individuals in need," said food and coalition spokeswoman Ruthann Skinner. "Besides garden produce, we also received a donation of bread from area supermarkets," she added.

"Share the Harvest is taking place this year at a time when caseloads at many emergency food pantries and other crisis food relief facilities in Utah are at the highest level of the year," said Utahns against Hunger spokesperson Grady Walker.

"Thousands of Utahns have more produce from their home vegetable gardens and fruit trees than they can possibly eat. Share the Harvest provides an easy and inexpensive way for them to help their neighbors in need," Walker added.

According to the food and shelter coalition, in 1987 more than 5,000 food packages were distributed to the needy at seven different sites. This year, other distribution centers are located in Salt Lake City, West Valley City, Midvale, Ogden, Price and Richfield.

Utahns against Hunger, a non-profit organization, and the food and shelter coalition invite all individuals and families in need of food assistance to receive food packages on Sunday afternoons.

Utah residents with extra garden produce are also encouraged to donate their surplus fruits and vegetables to the coalition headquarters on weekends.

Closed meeting held for Swapp clan leader; pre-sentence reports reviewed by judge

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A federal judge met separately Monday with prosecutors and a defense attorney for a polygamist clan leader convicted in the January bombing of an LDS chapel and subsequent shootout with police.

The meetings with U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins were to review pre-sentence reports to be presented during Friday sentencing hearings for clan patriarch Addam Swapp; his mother-in-law, Vicki Singer and her son, John Timothy Singer, and Swapp's brother, Jonathan.

Swapp family members came to the courthouse Monday but were not allowed to attend the closed meetings in Jenkins' chambers.

Swapp's lawyer, John R. Bucher, was the only defense attorney present, but several prosecutors from the U.S. attorney's office attended the closed-door sessions.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Schwendiman said pre-sentence meetings are required under the old sentencing guidelines. Newer guidelines, which did not require such meetings, were recently declared unconstitutional by Utah's federal judges.

The judges, who sat en banc in June to hear arguments from defense attorneys, ruled the new guidelines violate the separation of powers between branches of government and impugn the procedural requirements of the Constitution.

Under the old guidelines, Jenkins would use only his own judgment to decide prison terms for the clan members.

However, U.S. Attorney Brent Ward has said he expects an appeal of that ruling to be successful before the U.S. Supreme Court, which is expected to render a final decision on the new guidelines' constitutionality in October.

If the new guidelines are re-imposed, it may be necessary to resent the Singer and Swapp defendants.

Schwendiman would not discuss details of the pre-sentence reports, saying they were prepared by the U.S. Probation Department and are under the control of the judge and can only be made public by him.

The four clan members are to be sentenced for crimes connected with the Jan. 16 bombing of the Kamas Stake Center in Marion, and the following 13-day standoff with police, which ended in a shootout that wounded Addam Swapp and killed Corrections Lt. Fred House.

The Swapp brothers and John Timothy Singer were convicted of the attempted second-degree murder of FBI agents in the shootout that ended the siege. Addam Swapp also was convicted of maliciously damaging the church, forcibly assaulting and resisting federal agents and possession of an unregistered bomb.

Mrs. Singer was convicted of the same charges with the exception of attempted murder. State murder charges are expected to be filed once the federal cases are wrapped up.

Grocery stores compete for consumer dollar

By HISAYOSHI IWAMITSU
Senior Reporter

Stressing that competition among Provo-area grocery stores heats up in the fall, an economic expert said the competitiveness creates better services to the community.

Niel R. Nielson, economic development specialist of the City of Provo Office of Economic Development, said an Aug. 10 grand opening of Smith's Food & Drug makes the contest among food stores much more intense.

A limited-customer, more-store circumstance in Provo causes less people to go to each store, he said. "It is the nature of the free market system where we live in."

According to Nielson, when Food 4 Less opened a year ago, Provo grocery stores confronted a similar situation. However, none of them ran out of business, and the number of customers increased because Food 4 Less brought people from other areas of the county to Provo. Consequently, the customer services became much better than before, he said.

Nielson said he expects that the competition this time will also carry positive results for the community. He said Smith's brought new customers from the southern part of Provo and Orem to this area and created job opportunities in the community.

Mark Burningham, store director of Smith's Food & Drug, said, "We are very excited to be here to take care of the community."

Burningham said Smith's has a lot of services the other food stores do not have. "We are here for serving the customers," Burningham said.

Nielson said, "Smith's tries to be more competitive in the markets. They want to get more people shopping. To do that, they improve services and diversify items."

Dave Webb, one of the co-owners of Food 4 Less, said the number of customers decreased about 10 percent since Smith's opened, but "we will regain the lost customers at once."

"Smith's is a more service type of market."

"But we keep our customers by guaranteeing them that we have the lowest price in town for 365 days a year. The warehouse type of operation is a way of the future," said Webb.

Ron Dallin, owner of Storehouse Markets, also said the price of Smith's is not the cheapest. "We have been the lowest price in Provo for 20 years and continue to be that," he said.

There are more than 15 big food stores in Provo and Orem, including three Albertson's Food Centers, two Allen's Super Save Markets, Clark's Market, Day's Thriftway, Farmer Jack Supermarkets, two Macey's, Norton's Food Center, two Dallins Storehouse Markets, Food 4 Less, two Ream's Food Bargain Warehouses, Dove's Happy Service Market and Smith's Food & Drug.

DELEGATE

Massachusetts led the crowd in a chorus of "where was George?"

In describing his experience on the convention floor, Densley said "there is a strong feeling of patriotism, a sense that history is in the making as you're standing there. It's exhilarating," he said.

Although Densley's first choice for the Republican vice presidential nomination was Jack Kemp, he is enthusiastic about the selection of Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle. "I think it's great. I have no problem with Dan Quayle. He's an exciting candidate and I think he'll attract a lot of young voters," said Densley.

"A lot of a delegate's time is spent outside of the convention," said Densley. "There are many receptions and meetings, particularly receptions. Some people were able to go out and do some sightseeing but I was tied up with quite a few interviews."

Being the youngest delegate, the 18-year-old was sought after by a media hungry for a story in the midst of a rather routine convention. "I was interviewed, it seems, by everybody from the Provo Daily Herald to the British Broadcasting Company. I was interviewed by Swiss television on the floor," he said.

Densley also made news when he suggested a Republican platform proposal recommending that American families meet together weekly to discuss moral issues such as illicit drug use and avoiding sexually transmitted diseases. The idea is similar to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saint Family Home Evening program, where the family meets together once a week.

"A lot of people picked up on the 'Mormon issue' of it ... I wasn't trying to institute a church program into national politics," said Densley. "The point is to take an idea that has a lot of sense behind it and that would make a strong, positive impact and implement it nationally. It would serve to turn around many, if not all of the moral and social problems that we have in America."

"The problem was that I came up with it a little too late," explained Densley. "If I'd have managed to get it into the platform before the convention, it probably would have been included," he said. Adding amendments to a party platform is a complicated maneuver and Densley lacked the time necessary to implement the proposal.

Densley will continue his education at BYU and remain politically active (he's currently a member of College Republicans), however he does not plan on being a delegate in 1992. "I'll be on my mission," he explained.
